LXXXIII - No. 6

June 2008

Raleigh, N.C.

From the tractor

Steve Troxler
Commissioner

I am personally looking forward to the Got to Be NC Festival June 5-8 at the State Fairgrounds. Celebrating North Carolina's agricultural heritage and raising awareness about North Carolina's $66 billion agriculture and agribusiness industry and the good food products made here in the state are great reasons for this event.

I always enjoy looking at old farm equipment, and we are anticipating having more than 700 pieces on display during the four-day event. It should be a great collection to view.

I'll even be bringing a small part of my personal collection to display in the Holshouser Building. I've been collecting and restoring items for a number of years and have some pieces on display now in the Agriculture Building in downtown Raleigh. I like people to know when they stop in the building that they aren't in just any state government offices, but they are in the Agriculture Building.

Among the items I will have on display are a one-horse wagon, a seven-horse-power throttle governor engine, a 24-inch Meadows grist mill on a wagon, hit-and-miss engine and a miniature carriage.

I think two of the things I find so interesting about the old equipment is how far we have come in terms of technological advances, but also how much we can still learn from these antiques.

The idea of using corn stalks and soybean hay to feed cattle during the 2007 drought actually was triggered by an antique piece

■ Antique tractors, N.C. Food Expo, barbecue cook-off, concerts, horse pulls slated for first-ever event

More than 700 antique tractors and pieces of farm equipment will be on display as part of the Got to be NC Festival June 5-8 at the N.C. State Fairgrounds in Raleigh. Machines dating back to the 1930s and representing brand names such as International Harvester, Ford, Allis-Chalmers, John Deere, Cub Cadet and Massey Ferguson will be part of the inaugural four-day event.

Many of these tractors will compete in the antique tractor pulls on Saturday and Sunday.

More than 20 clubs from across the state will be showcasing equipment such as tractors, hit-and-miss engines, plows, corn shellers and mowers. In addition, prizes will be awarded for the best tractor equipment display in three different age categories: prior to 1930, 1930-1949 and 1950-1960.

"Being a farmer myself, I am particularly excited to see all of the antique equipment that will be brought in," said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler. "This is shaping up to be one of the largest antique tractor and farm equipment shows in the Eastern United States, and it will be a lot of fun to see all of the old names and models on display."

Hit-and-miss engines, like the ones shown above, will be displayed at the Got to Be NC Festival June 5-8 at the State Fairgrounds in Raleigh.

Participating clubs include Eastern NC Chapter #37 International Harvester Club, Carolina Antique Tractor Pullers Association, Iron Peddlers Antique Power Club, Apple Country Antique Engine & Tractor Association, Pee Dee Antique Power Club and Ford/Fordson Collectors Association.

"The show will be fun and educational for the whole family," said Pat Short, the festival's motorsports coordinator. "Adults can reminisce about the equipment they used or grew up with on the farm, while children can learn all about the agricultural heritage of North Carolina."

Statewide hay relief efforts end

■ Rain brings hay and optimism

With first cuttings of hay occurring across the state and rainfall raising soil moisture levels, the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services has been able to demobilize its hay relief programs.

"While many pastures still need renovation, and farmers still have a lot of recovering left to do, there are many encouraging signs that farms are on their way to returning to normal feeding operations," said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler.

Department staff logged more than 16,000 hours and 50,000 miles working on drought and hay assistance since last summer, Troxler said.

The Hay Alert Web site, which helps match hay buyers and sellers, had 290,000 visits from August to early May, and

In addition to the tractors and equipment on display, the Sandhills Antique Farm Equipment Club from Lillington will run antique farm equipment several times a day to demonstrate how the pieces work and what they were used for.

This includes a corn shredder, thrashing machine, hay baler, corn shellers, grist mill, feed mill, tobacco stick cutter and other pieces of belt-driven equipment.

What's a festival without great food?

There will be plenty to sample and buy at the festival. More than 75 North Carolina food companies will be showcasing their products in the Got to be NC Agriculture Food Expo in the Exposition Building. Visitors can expect to find a variety of food products, from barbecue sauces to gourmet candy apples.

"The Food Expo will give festival attendees the chance to see, taste and buy many of the great products that we produce right here in North Carolina," Troxler said. "This is a great opportunity for residents to become familiar with the great variety of North Carolina products so that they know what to look for the next time they go shopping."

All of the companies participating in the Food Expo are members of the Goodness Grows in North Carolina program, the official marketing program of the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services.

"There has been a lot of enthusiasm from our members and we are looking forward to a great show," said Jeff Jennings, Goodness Grows director.

The Food Expo will be open on Friday from 4 to 9 p.m., and on Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Additional food vendors will be scattered across the fairgrounds.

Live cooking demonstrations by local chefs and food enthusiasts will also take place daily in the Exposition Building. Booths for local artisans and other organizations will also be in the building.

Festival hours will be 3 p.m.-midnight Thursday and Friday, and 10 a.m.-midnight Saturday and Sunday. Admission is free. Tickets to events in the Sam Rand Grandstand will be $5.

It's a BBQ showdown

Twenty-five teams from across the state will gather at the State Fairgrounds and begin cooking Friday night to prepare for judging on Saturday. The annual contest, sponsored by the N.C. Pork Council, will award the tops teams in both culinary and showmanship divisions.

The winning team will be announced at noon on Saturday, June 7.

Although winning cooks will share more than $4,700 worth of cash prizes, the two- to four-person teams won't be the only ones to benefit from the competition. Both the Inter-Faith Food Shuttle, a Raleigh-based organization that distributes food to the area's poor and undernourished, and the Wake Tech Culinary Technology program will receive all proceeds made from the sale of competing teams' barbecue to festival-goers.

"This is a perfect fit to support culinary training programs like the Wake Tech curriculum and our own work-training program set up for those affected by situations such as homelessness, addiction or incarceration," said Jill Staton Bullard, president of the Inter-Faith Food Shuttle. "The rising price of diesel fuel is killing our budget, so I can't think of a better way to raise funds than with North Carolina barbecue at the Got to Be NC Festival."

The festival will also feature carnival rides and games, the state barbecue cooking championship and more. For more information, go to www.ncagfest.com.

Farmers should begin pasture renovation with soil testing

Throughout North Carolina, many pastures are still in decline due to last year's drought. Now that we've had some rain, it's time to start turning that around. Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler urges anyone planning to renovate cool-season pasture grasses in the fall to begin that process by submitting soil samples now.

At the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services' soil testing lab, sample turn-around time is shortest during summer months. From the time samples arrive at the lab, analysis takes two weeks or less. Soil reports are immediately posted online at www.ncagr.com/agronomi.

The primary reason for soil testing now is to get the lime recommendation. If lime is applied in June, then there will be sufficient time for it to raise soil pH before pasture renovation in the fall. Proper soil preparation now will help ensure the success of re-seeding efforts in September.

To collect a representative soil sample, follow these basic guidelines: For each sample, collect 15 to 20 cores from random locations within a uniform 5- to 15-acre field. Collect cores to a depth of 4 inches. Mix these cores well in a plastic bucket, and then use this mixture to fill the soil sample box. For additional instructions, contact an NCDA&CS regional agronomist or visit www.ncagr.com/agronomi/uyrst.htm#info.

The best way to apply lime will depend on the amount recommended in the soil report. For 1.5 tons or less, surface application is acceptable. If the report recommends more than 1.5 tons and the pasture cannot be tilled, then surface-apply 1 ton of lime and apply the rest the following year. However, if tillage is an option, the best approach is to mix the entire amount of lime thoroughly into the soil. Incorporation of lime into the soil will give the new stand of grass a better chance of withstanding dry conditions.

For advice on soil testing and pasture nutrient needs, go to www.ncagr.com/agronomi/rahome.htm and contact the regional agronomist serving your county.

Hay efforts

the Hay Alert hotline fielded 5,200 calls. The hotline has been deactivated, but the Web site is available year-round at www.ncagr.com/hayalert.

The department operated several transportation cost-share assistance programs to help livestock owners with the cost of trucking in hay to feed their animals during the drought. These programs paid a total of about $550,000 to farmers and ranchers.

In early December, the department received approval from the Council of State to use up to $3.5 million as a revolving credit line to purchase and transport hay to North Carolina, where it could be resold to farmers for the cost of the hay and transportation.

The department sold hay at its research stations in Waynesville, Laurel Springs, Salisbury, Oxford and Kinston and at the Piedmont Triad Farmers Market in Colfax. The locations were chosen because of their capability for storing hay and their proximity to areas with large populations of livestock.

The Emergency Hay Program, as it was known, spent nearly $532,000 to bring in more than 2,700 tons of hay from other U.S. states and Canada.

Troxler said the hay relief effort was successful because so many agencies, nonprofit groups, companies and citizens worked together. "This effort really went beyond our department," he said. "It's been amazing to see the level of teamwork we achieved. For example, with the help of Cooperative Extension and N.C. State University, we informed countless livestock owners about alternative forages. We helped spur the movement of about 35,000 bales of corn fodder and soybean hay across the state.

"Through all these efforts and teamwork, we were able to prevent a major animal welfare crisis," he said.

State Fair will feature an extra day of fun in 2008

Fair dates are Oct. 16-26

Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler announced recently that the N.C. State Fair will open its gates a day early for a preview on Thursday, Oct. 16. Opening early will give fairgoers an extra day to “Take Time for a Great Time,” the 2008 State Fair theme.

Gates will open at 3 p.m., and the Midway and exhibit halls will open at 4. The Midway will close at midnight. Admission on Thursday will be $5 for adults and $1 for children ages 6-12. Children under 6 and adults 65 and over will get in free. Gate admission for the other State Fair dates will be $7 for adults and $2 for children ages 6-12.

It is the first time in 22 years officials have added days to the State Fair.

“Last year, the State Fair set records for daily and total attendance, with more than 858,000 people coming out to have fun,” Troxler said. “Adding a day gives visitors even more time to have a great time learning about agriculture and experiencing the exhibits, rides, games and food.”

Fairgoers attending the preview will have the option of purchasing wristbands offering unlimited Midway rides that day only. Wristbands will cost $25 each.

State Fair organizers anticipate that the N.C. Department of Labor will have inspected and certified about 85 percent of the rides for operation in time for the Oct. 16 opening. Concession stands, exhibit halls and grounds entertainment also will be ready for the early start.

An extra day also means an extra show in Dorton Arena. Country singer Josh Turner will kick off the State Fair entertainment Thursday night, performing hits such as “Firecracker” and “Long Black Train.” The full Dorton Arena lineup, along with details about the new rides that Powers Great American Midways plans to offer, will be announced this summer.

The State Fair will run Oct. 16-26 at the State Fairgrounds. Information will be available at www.ncstatefair.org.

AgroTips

Prepare for a fall vegetable garden by soil testing.

If you are thinking about planting a fall vegetable garden in July or August, then you need to take the first step in June - Soil test. The test is free, and sampling instructions are available online at www.ncagr.com/agronomi/pdffiles/samhome.pdf. Sample boxes and information sheets are available at all county Cooperative Extension offices. Within two weeks, you should have the information you need to apply lime and fertilizer for a productive garden.

Test source water for irrigation systems.

Before you turn on that drip or overhead irrigation system, it is a good idea to collect samples of your source water and have it tested by the NCDA&CS Agronomic Division. Chemical problems with source water can affect plant growth and quality. By testing water now, you can correct any problems before you start irrigating your crops.

Solution analysis is a service that measures the chemical properties of water that affect plants. In Eastern North Carolina, high alkalinity is a potential water problem. Irrigating with highly alkaline water can lead to an increase in soil pH that can limit availability of some essential plant nutrients, especially micronutrients.

The solution analysis report indicates whether alkalinity is a potential problem and, if so, provides helpful advice to correct it. Some other potential source water problems include high soluble salts, iron, boron, sodium or chloride. Once identified, these problems can either be corrected or effectively managed to prevent plant growth problems.

If crop plants are stunted or discolored, check for nematodes.

The best way to find out if nematodes are responsible for an area of poor crop growth is to collect and submit two sets of soil samples: one for nematode assay and one for fertility analysis. An accurate diagnosis during the growing season provides a sound basis for effective management in the future.

For nematode assay, collect samples at the margins of affected areas where symptoms are moderate to severe. Avoid areas where plants are already dead or dying. For each nematode sample, collect at least 20 cores from the top 8 to 12 inches of soil, mix them together, and then fill a one-quart plastic bag about three quarters full. Be sure the sample includes at least a small handful of roots from the affected plants. Send a completed Nematode-Problem Diagnosis Information sheet along with the samples as well as the appropriate fee ($3 per sample). For fertility analysis, use excess soil to fill a standard soil test box. Fill out the orange information sheet designated for problem soil samples.

Package and address soil test and nematode assay samples separately so they will arrive at the correct laboratory. Use the Mail Service Center address when sending samples through the U.S. Postal Service.

Fertilize centipedegrass lawns in June.

The nitrogen fertilization rate and schedule for centipedegrass are different from those of other warm-season grasses. Centipede requires only 0.5 pound of nitrogen per 1,000 square feet per year, and all of this amount should be applied in June. The majority of fertility related centipede growth problems result from applying too much lime and phosphorus or inadequately maintaining soil potassium levels. These problems can be prevented by soil sampling and following recommendations. If you have not taken a soil sample in the last two or three years, you may want to do so to find out your lawn’s fertility needs. When filling out the soil information sheet for your sample(s), remember that centipedegrass has its own crop code (022).

Important Reminder: Do not fertilize cool-season lawn grasses—fescue, ryegrass and bluegrass—during the summer. Wait until September.

came across when I was looking to add to my collection.

I saw a fodder shredder or ensilage machine like one my grandfather had that was used to chop up corn stalks to feed livestock. Some of the machines were larger and processed more, some were smaller and required more hands-on labor.

That memory got me thinking that we might be able to use corn stalks and soybean hay, items not traditionally used, to bring some relief to farmers whose grazing lands were drying up and to avert a potential animal welfare crisis.

With the help of N.C. State University, we looked at nutritional content to see if this was a feasible solution. We found that, used with supplemental feed, the corn stalks and soybean hay would work. Cooperative Extension agents and N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services staff starting holding workshops across the state to talk to farmers about how this would work, and farmers started baling these commodities for use.

It was a classic case of farmer helping farmer, and I know it helped a lot of producers avoid a real crisis. As I traveled across the state, I saw farm after farm where producers were using the corn and soybean fodder for their cattle. That was a great feeling.

Whenever I attend an antique farm equipment show, one of the most rewarding experiences to me is seeing a grandfather or father explaining to a young child how an old piece of equipment worked and what it was used for. It is important for us to pass on this knowledge, because it may provide answers in the future.

I hope we have great weather and a great turnout for the Got to Be NC Festival. And I hope to see a lot of you.

Troxler advises farmers to prepare for hurricane season

With forecasts calling for a busy hurricane season, Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler reminds farmers to take necessary steps to help protect their farms if a storm strikes.

“For farmers, one major storm can be one too many,” Troxler said. “Planning is the key to reducing the potential damage from hurricanes and tropical storms.”

Hurricane season runs June 1-Nov. 30, and forecasts predict as many as 15 named storms in the Atlantic this year.

Farmers need to make preparations for their families, crews, equipment and buildings, and have backup plans for electricity for their barns and other critical farm facilities, Troxler said.

Additionally, livestock operations should have emergency plans that address power needs and on-site feed capabilities.

Troxler said farmers should have a transfer switch properly installed so they can use a generator. A properly installed transfer switch is critical for the protection of farm facilities and utility workers, he said.

Troxler offered the following tips for preparing farms for major storms:

- Secure items or equipment that might blow away.
- Identify places to relocate animals from low-lying areas.
- Check generators to be sure they are in good working order and secure a sufficient amount of fuel to operate them.
- Turn off the propane supply at tanks.
- Secure propane tanks in the event of flooding to prevent them from floating away.
- Move equipment to the highest open ground possible away from trees or buildings that could cause damage.
- Mark animals with an identifier so they can be easily returned if lost. Examples are ear tags with name of farm and phone numbers, brands, paint markings on hooves or coat or clipped initials in the hair.
- Move feed to higher ground or to a more accessible place in case of flooding or transportation problems.
- Coordinate with neighbors beforehand and discuss what resources can be shared. Examples include a backhoe or set of panels.
- Keep a list of important phone numbers in order to make calls following a storm.

Examples include the local emergency management office, county extension agent, insurance agent, county Farm Service Agency and private vets.

- Monitor local weather reports for up-to-the-minute information on storms.

Pesticide applicators should also look to secure their pesticide storage areas. Applicators in low-lying areas should do whatever they can to elevate or move pesticides to locations that are less likely to flood.

No-till drills available for farmers to rent to renovate pastures

Twenty-five soil and water districts have drills to help farmers renovate pastures

The N.C. Foundation for Soil and Water Conservation has purchased 25 no-till grass drills for soil and water districts to rent to farmers needing to renovate pastures damaged by drought.

The Truax FlexII-88 drills began arriving in North Carolina in late May and will be delivered to districts throughout June.

The foundation selected the following soil and water districts to receive the drills based on need and pasture acreage: Alleghany, Anson, Ashe, Buncombe, Caldwell, Chatham, Davidson, Davie, Granville, Guilford, Halifax, Lincoln, Madison, Orange, Person, Rockingham, Rowan, Rutherford, Stanly, Stokes, Surry, Union, Watauga, Wilkes and Yadkin.

The 25 districts contain more than 15,600 farms and 809,000 acres of pasture land.

Farmers in these districts who want to rent a drill should contact their district office. Districts will set the rental fees, which probably will range from $8 to $10 per acre, said Cecil Settle, executive director of the foundation.

“These drills will help accelerate pasture renovation in hard-hit districts,” said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler.

The foundation purchased the drills using an allocation of $370,800 approved by the Council of State in May. The council is composed of Troxler, the governor and eight other elected state leaders.

Recipes of the month

Janice Wolfe of Fuquay-Varina took home a blue ribbon and $250 for the top dish in the House-Autry Mills In Your Oven “for your family” recipe contest at the 2007 N.C. State Fair.

Wolfe’s recipe was Honey Mustard Oven-Fried Potato Wedges.

Jackie Wilder of Raleigh got second place and $100 for her Pork Pita recipe, and Kasey Bass of Dunn took home third-place honors and $50 for her Cheese Salsa Dip.

Judges also awarded an honorable mention to Lisa Woodward of Hillsborough for her Italian Chicken with Lemon Mushroom pan sauce.

The winning recipe follows:

Honey Mustard Oven Fried Potato Wedges

- 1 pkg. House-Autry Mills In Your Oven Pork Coating mix
- 4 large baking potatoes (pre-baked)
- ½ cup mayonnaise
- ½ teaspoon seasoned salt
- 4 tablespoons honey mustard
- ¼ teaspoon black pepper

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Cut potatoes into six wedges. Mix mayonnaise, seasoned salt, honey mustard and pepper together. Coat the potato wedges with mixture. Roll wedges in pork seasoning mix. Place on greased cookie sheet; bake 15 minutes. Add to any meal. Serves four. Mayonnaise mix can be used for dipping.

Molly Jarman of Carrboro took home first place and $200 in the KC Masterpiece Memorable Meals Contest at the N.C. State Fair. Jarmen’s recipe, Barbeque Spice Cookies, also earned her the chance to win a $1,000 national grand prize. Pam Garcia of Raleigh took home $100 for Pam’s First-Time Ribs, and Denise Walker of Cary took home $50 for KC Masterpiece BBQ Chicken Pizza.

Entries were judged on flavor, ease of creation and presentation.

The winning recipe follows:

Barbeque Spice Cookies

- 1 ½ cups butter (3 sticks)
- ½ cup KC Masterpiece Original BBQ Sauce
- 2 cups sugar
- 2 eggs
- 4 cups flour
- 4 teaspoons baking soda
- 1 teaspoon ground ginger
- 1 teaspoon ground cloves
- 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1 cup tubinado or granulated sugar

Melt butter in a large bowl. Add BBQ sauce, sugar and eggs to melted butter and beat well. Sift together flour, baking soda and spices. Add flour mixture to butter mixture and mix until flour is incorporated. Refrigerate several hours until the dough is firm. Make dough into small balls (¾ inch diameter) and roll in tubinado or granulated sugar. Bake at 350 degrees for 8-10 minutes, until firm. Refrigerated dough can also be shaped into a 1-inch thick roll and sliced. Dip the slices in sugar before baking.
